

LEADERSHIP OASIS

Navigating Political Differences in the Workplace

We've heard the old adage, "Don't discuss politics at work!" Yet, as organizations strive to adapt to cultural differences more effectively, many aren't sure how to navigate the balance between embracing authenticity, and the risks with sharing personal beliefs at work. Employment lawyer Rebecca Strauss will discuss whether employers may prohibit political discussions and activities at work and what a policy might look like at private sector and public sector organizations.

REGISTER NOW

 May 21

11:30 a.m. - Noon
Lunch and Networking

Noon - 1 p.m.
Presentation

Bronson Gilmore Center Auditorium

7 Healthcare Plz
Kalamazoo, MI 49007

Presented By: Rebecca L. Strauss

Rebecca Strauss is an employment attorney who takes on her clients' issues as her own by offering legally sound, practical advice. Strauss counsels manufacturers, health care providers, professional service providers, and public and private employers. She advises a preventive approach to ensure protective policies and maintain compliant processes and procedures.

